

EurActiv.com's new look: Still yellow, even more interactive.
 >> Learn more...

EN
FR
DE

EU news & policy debates
- across languages -

France News
 Jean-Michel Baylet sor...
 La Slovaquie veut pren...
 L'agenda Euro...
 L'EFSA pourra...
 Dernières nouvelles de...
 La Libye, nouvelle ter...

GO

EurActiv.com  Network

Sign up to our newsletters >

MONDAY 5 SEPTEMBER 2011

BROWSE ALL SECTIONS ▾

NEWS ▾ | SPECIAL REPORTS ▾ | LINKSDOSSIERS ▾ | INTERVIEWS ▾ | OPINIONS ▾ | BLOGS ▾ | VIDEOS ▾

Home > Public Affairs > news

EU struggles with being open about transparency

ADVERTISING

Published 24 March 2011
 Tags access to documents public access to documents transparency Transparency initiative

Like 10 | Tweet 12 | Share 2

EU member states are reluctant to reveal whether or not they support proposals by the European Commission to overhaul EU transparency law, a media investigation carried out this week reveals, triggering fears that the European Union is becoming less accountable to citizens.

BACKGROUND:

Entitlement to access European Commission, European Parliament and EU Council documents is considered a fundamental right of European citizens and a key element of the wider debate surrounding the transparency and openness of the EU institutions.

Since the adoption of the Lisbon Treaty, the Parliament has argued EU access to documents laws should be widened to cover all European institutions, bodies and agencies,

... [+]

Many of the documents that arrive in Helen Darbishire's mailbox have important parts blacked out, and many more don't arrive at all. That may be unusual for freedom-of-information requests, particularly given that the subject matter is government transparency.

Darbishire has asked the European Union's 27 member states for documents showing whether they support proposals by the European Commission to overhaul EU transparency law.

The Commission's proposed changes would limit public access only to those EU documents that have been "formally transmitted": a move transparency groups say would curtail the public's ability to track the lawmaking process.

"It would basically mean the European Union is less accountable," said Darbishire, of the transparency group Access Info Europe. "It will make it harder to know what the EU is doing and to verify the influence of lobby groups and others."

Responding to her requests, most EU member states refused to release anything, citing ongoing negotiations.

In the papers that were released, the names of countries proposing to change the transparency law were hidden. Darbishire was disappointed, and the EU's second-highest court ruled on Tuesday (22 March) that member states had acted wrongly.

"If citizens are to be able to exercise their democratic rights, they must be in a position to follow in detail the decision-making process," the EU General Court said.

Openness battle looms

Now a much bigger battle looms over how open the EU must be about its workings. As EU politicians prepare to vote on the Commission's transparency proposal in the coming months, they are deeply divided over how to balance transparent governance and the protection of real secrets.

"The strengthening of data protection must take top priority," said Renate Sommer, a German MEP (European People's Party). "It's a bit of a tightrope operation."

WikiLeaks wary

Online secrets disseminator WikiLeaks has shown the perils of total public access.

Cables the group has released have revealed embarrassing details of EU diplomatic exchanges, and even contributed to the popular anger that brought down Tunisia's government in January.

EU officials say they want to ensure the secrecy of documents that could cause confusion or compromise negotiations.

"If it's a draft that has not been validated, it could be misinterpreted that this is the official view," said Marc Maes, a Commission official who helped draft the proposal. "Those documents should not be released."

But critics say crucial details of EU work and the influence of special interests could be suppressed with the new rules.

"When you read the Commission proposal, it's pretty clear this would be a real step backward for transparency," said Anais Berthier, a lawyer with environmental group ClientEarth, which has sued the EU over transparency issues.

EurActors & Content Partners

AGEP Association Management	Burson-Marsteller	CEC Government Relations
FLESHMAN-HILLARD	GELLIS	Grayling
Kreab Gavin Anderson	Hill &amp; Knowlton	Kellen Europe
	Mostra	OGLVY
	Quadrant	Forum Ekonomiczne Krynica-Zdrój

ADVERTISING

MORE ON THIS TOPIC NEWS

Court rejects journalists' calls for full EU transparency

Parliament pushes for all EU documents to be made public

LINKSDOSSIERS

Transparency Initiative

INSIDE THIS SECTION

Commission screens media law implementation

UK press scandal to test competition rules

Lobbyists link EU tobacco curbs to rising crime, Roma

Brussels' Eurocrats see EU project in 'lasting crisis'

EU JOBS IN PA

European Government Relations - Vice President - Based in Brussels or London

Senior Communications Manager

Senior Online Project Manager

Special Report: Brussels, Warsaw make joint case for regional funds

A majority in the European Parliament supports widening public access. But most EU member states want tighter access rules, in line with the Commission's proposal, officials say.

With such divergent stances, the debate has already dragged on for three years - too long for the Commission, which on Wednesday announced a separate proposal covering the most pressing issues that it hopes to fast-track.

About 5,000 requests for EU documents are made each year, mostly by academics, interest groups and lawyers.

Whether such documents will be released in the future could come down to a single definition.

"The proposal basically defines when a document exists," said Maes. "We're trying to clear up a grey area."

(EurActiv with Reuters.)

External Links

European Union

- European Commission: Public access to documents: The European Commission proposes to extend rules to all EU institutions (Press release; 23 March 2011) [FR] [DE]
- European Commission: Access to documents (Portal) [FR] [DE]
- European Parliament: Access to documents (Portal) [FR] [DE]

RECENT BLOGACTIV POSTS

open europe blog team Time to get serious about Commissioners' code of conduct

david mekkaoui Flanders is afraid to split Belgium

the risk monger Corporate Europe Hypocrisy

the risk monger Warning: (Volcanic) Smoking may be hazardous to your health andreas Letter to Ms. Neelie Kroes, European Commission Vice-President for the 'Digital Agenda'

EU JOBS

Project Manager (Special advisor)

Director (GRADEAD14) COM2011/10314 for the Directorate-General for Human Resources and Security

Head of Finance at EMBL

Post an EU job

EU PRESS RELEASES

MHP Communications

High Representative's Media & Communications head jumps to MHP Brussels

Send us your press release

AGENDA

22 September 2011 - 23 September 2011:

Repetition: Course Series: "Understanding Decision-Making in the European Union: Principles, Procedures, Practice"

01 December 2011 - 02 December 2011:

Repetition: Course Series: "Understanding Decision-Making in the European Union: Principles, Procedures, Practice"

Post an event >>

ADVERTISING

EurActiv Network: CZ DE ES FR HU PL RO SK TR UK Assoc. Partners BG RS Synd. Partners GR LT EUXTV BlogActiv EurActiv Politech

SERVICES

Corporate sponsoring
Video Services
EurActor Membership
B2C & B2B advertising
Network Advertising
Workshops & Special Reports
EU Projects
Agenda & FR Service

YELLOW PAGES

Political Parties
Consultancies
EU Projects list
Education/Training

EURACTIV JOBSITE

Post a job
Latest jobs

ABOUT EURACTIV

EurActiv Network
Concept & Objectives
Editorial Mission
EurActiv.com/FLC
Partners
Jobs at EurActiv
Logo gallery
FAQ
Our Newsletters

PRESS OFFICE

EurActiv Readership
EurActiv Surveys
Press Releases

FONDATION EURACTIV-POLITECH

About Fondation
Internships
Trainings

CONTACT US

Brussels Network Office:
International Press Centre
Boulevard Charlemagne, 1 b1
B-1041 Brussels
T: +32 (0) 2 226 58 10
F: +32 (2) 2 226 58 20
Contact us by mail

Efficacité et transparence des acteurs européens (C) 1999-2011 EurActiv.com/FLC | Terms and Conditions | FAQ | Jobs at EurActiv | Contact